

Eleven Choice Spots to Take Mom for Brunch This Sunday

The Ones With Shakespeare-Inspired Drinks and Nutella Crepes with Waterfront Views and Other Things She Likes

She Requires: A table full of Mediterranean mezze. (...followed by some shopping in Soho.)

She'll Receive: A trip to Shuka: the Eastern Mediterranean-inspired spot in Soho that's got a special brunch on offer this Sunday involving turkish-style scrambled eggs, shakshuka and poppyseed coffee cake with cardamon-lemon glaze. We will leave part 2 of her request up to you.

Shuka, 38 MacDougal St (between Houston and Prince), 212-475-7500

She Requires: Bubbly. Lots and lots of bubbly.

She'll Receive: A chill East Village sidewalk brunch fueled $25 bottles of Prosecco to pair with fresh raspberry-topped oatmeal-buttermilk pancakes.

Boulton & Watt, 5 Avenue A (at E Houston), 646-490-6004

She Requires: Live jazz, good views and sangria.

She'll Receive: Brunch up on the scenic rooftop at Sanctuary Hotel, where they're doing a three-course prix-fixe with Prosecco, salmon Benedicts and chocolate mousse, and the background music to go with it.

11am—3pm, $39, Haven Rooftop at Sanctuary Hotel, 132 W 47th St (between 6th and 7th), 212-466-9000
